Why American Apparel?

Sweatshop Free:

American Apparel garments are made by motivated employees who earn a living wage (up to 50 times more than global standards) and have access to affordable healthcare and benefits.

Vertically Integrated Manufacturing:

American Apparel operates the largest sewing facility in North America. By integrating our manufacturing, distribution and creative processes, we provide quicker turnaround times, which in turn allows us to better accommodate our customers.

Environmental Commitment:

American Apparel is committed to sustainability. By concentrating our operations within a few square miles of each other and by shipping via excess space on passenger planes and busses, our carbon footprint is reduced drastically. In addition, recycling our excess textile scraps and other materials has made American Apparel virtually landfill free.

Investing in the future:

For us, American manufacturing is not a trend. Manufacturing in America requires risk taking and long-term investment, a model we have remained committed to since the company's founding in Los Angeles, over 15 years ago. Passion and Innovation for the Apparel Industry.

That's American Apparel.
